

Ryan Witt serves as a Growth Advisor to CBT. Ryan started his career educating and presenting novel statutory frameworks to federal regulators in the United States to improve the adoption of molecular characterization techniques, combination medical products, and access protocols to experimental medicines. Following this, he helped high-growth startups in healthcare, backed by top venture capitalists and angel investors in the healthcare and life sciences' sectors move to their next inflection points. The products Mr. Witt has helped develop and bring to market over the years are used by tens of thousands of clinicians and millions of patients worldwide. In 2018, trade organization Biocom awarded Mr. Witt with a Catalyst Award; and, in 2014 the federal government of the United States appointed him to the Consumer Empowerment Working Group of the Department of Health and Human Services.

Mr. Witt is a mentor at KidsX (a pediatric accelerator covering over 25 hospitals across the world), Blockbuster Tokyo, and ScaleHealth; serves on Biocom's Capital Development and Startup Resources Committees respectively, serves as Hub Director at UCLA Biodesign, and periodically volunteers with Health Extension Foundation and the Society for Participatory Medicine.
